News release

2 November 2007

Flaming good bonfire weekend

Firework celebrations won't be a damp squib, forecasters at the Met Office are predicting. Mainly dry and settled weather is expected this weekend, although temperatures will be lower than recently experienced.

The next few days will also see light winds for much of the UK which, combined with smoke from bonfires, could increase the risk of patchy mist and fog.

Martin Young, chief forecaster at the Met Office said: "Southern areas of the UK have already seen a lot of dry weather over recent days, and this is expected to be the case for much of the country this coming weekend, and probably on Bonfire Night itself. It will become a good deal chillier than of late, so you may need to wrap up if you are out at any displays".

Latest forecast for the UK

For further information:
Met Office Press Office +44 (0)1392 886655
E-mail: pressoffice@metoffice.gov.uk

Met Office Customer Centre 0870 900 0100
If you're outside the UK +44 (0)1392 885680

©Crown copyright www.metoffice.gov.uk